EAST-WEST HISTORY IS TRACED

Learning Held Policy Guide

by Andy Ross

Through the eyes of an historian, Mrs. Barbara Ward Jackson traced the main phases of contact between East and West as she delivered the first of three Beatty Memorial Lectures last night.

"There have been three main points of contact," she said, "and a learning and understanding of these relationships is essential as a guide to the West in its present and future towards the East."

A capacity crowd was present at the Sir Arthur Currie Gymnasium to hear Mrs. Jackson, noted British economist. She will continue her discussion of East And West: Contrasts And Elements Of Collaboration, on Friday and next Monday.

Mrs. Jackson fixed the first main period of contact between the Eastern and Western civilizations as lying between 1,000 B.C. and 500 A.D. She discussed them on the ideological, political, and economic levels, and felt that it had left the Eastern nations virtually unchanged.

"It produced no sense of extreme clash between the Eastern and Western civilizations," she said.

Contact almost ceased in the next millenium, she noted, except for the wars with the Mohammedans. But when contact was re-established around 1500 AD, Mrs. Jackson said she felt it was no longer a meeting of two civilizations with the same basic conception of life.

"While there had been superficial changes in the East, the fundamental structure of the Orient had not changed. The same did not hold true for the West."

On the religious level, she said, an idea of progress and purposefulness had appeared in Western thought, "an idea alien to the Eastern mind. The importance of the individual working out his own destiny was in direct contrast to the Eastern conception of a passive role for men."

Several new ideas also appeared on the political level, she noted. "The ideas of constitutional government, individual freedom and the equality of man appeared. These ideas were alien to the despotic government of the East and helped to widen the ground upon which East and West could meet," she said.

"The impact of the enormous fissionable force set off by the West

HELPING HAND : There were 339 helping hands as the blood clinic opened yesterday, in the form of willing arms. Several more of the same are needed to put the drive over its objective of 2000 pints. The clinic is located in the basement of the Physical Science Center.

Commerce Leads

339 Pints Are Collected In Clinic's First Day

A total of 339 pints of blood was collected yesterday at the opening day of the Blood Clinic.

The total is 52 more than the Clinic received last year at the same time. The committee was optimistic over yesterday's results, as they felt that the rain might have put a damper on students' spirits.

Cencerning competition between the three undergraduate societies, the breakdown is as follows:

Faculty of Commerce:	55 points	12.6%
Faculty of Arts and Science:	120 points	8.8%
Faculty of Engineering:	114 points	7.3%

The above three faculties' percentages work on the same handicap system that was in effect in former years; the purpose of the system is to overcome the unequal percentage of students enrolled in the faculties.

The number of pints given from the other faculties is as follows: Medicine 10; Staff 9; Divinity 8; Physio-Therapy and Physical Education 8ô Graduate Nurses 7; Graduate Studies 6; Law 2; Dentistry 0; Fine Arts 0; Music 0; Education 0.

In the residences: at RVC, the east wing and the west and main wings are tied with four each. Wilson Hall is ahead of Douglas Hall with totals of seven and six respectively.

A total of 106 pints was collected from the men's fraternities. The Phi Ep's lead the field with a total of 18; Phi Gamma is second with 11; Lambda Chi, Psi Upsilon, and Sigma Chi are tied for third place with 10.

Eighteen pints were given from the women's fraternities. Delta Gamma is leading the race with 5; Gamma Phi Beta follows with 4; and Kappa Alpha Theta runs third with three pints.

CBC photographers were present to watch Dr. F. Cyril James, principal and vice-chancellor of McGill, cut a tape and declare the clinic officially open. Several news photographers arrived in the afternoon to snap students registering to give blood, donating, and recuperating afterwards.

'WHO IS BEST TYRANT' IS RAFT DEBATE TOPIC

"If there were a dictatorship in Quebec, who would make the best dictator?" will be the topic under discussion by the faculties of Arts and Science, Commerce, and Law at the Raft Debate tonight at 8 p.m. in the Union.

Professor Byrd of Commerce, Prof. Cohen of Law, Prof. Launay of Arts, and Prof. Stanley of Science will each put forth his opinions as to why he, and not his colleagues is fit to assume the hypothetical dictatorship of the Province of Quebec.

Attended London

Prof. Byrd attended the University of London where he obtained his M. A. in English Literature; while in England he also received his C. A. Degree. He is a member of the British, Natal, and Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants. From 1929-1948 Prof. Byrd was on the staff at Natal University of Durban, South Africa. In 1948 he joined the McGill Staff where he is presently teaching accountancy.

Born in Winnipeg, Prof. Cohen attended Manitoba, Northwestern, and Harvard Universities. From 1941-42 he held the position of Special Correspondent of the Christian Science Monitor. Prof. Cohen has contributed to many Canadian and American Journals, and presently holds the position of President of the Canadian Branch of the International Law Association.

Born in France

Prof. Launay, born in France, graduated from the University of Paris at the age of 17. His higher degrees include the Agregation de l'University de France. Prior to the second World War Prof. Launay taught English Literature at the University of Rennes, France, and joined McGill in 1946 as Professor of French Language and Literature, and Chairman of the Department of Romance Languages, which position he still holds.

LAST CHANCE

All graduating students in ARTS go to Van Dyck's, October 25-28, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. for graduation photos.

AN ENCOURAGING RESPONSE

The Blood Donor Clinic ended its first session this afternoon after having collected 339 pints of blood. This number represents a sizable increase over the 287 pints that were collected after the first day last year, and, if it is indicative of the overall response, McGill should have no difficulty setting a new mark.

Two thousand pints have been set as the goal this year. The sum is to be collected over a period of seven days including next Monday and Tuesday.

As an added incentive to McGill students, Birks Ltd. has donated a trophy to be awarded to the winner of the annual blood competition between the University of Montreal and McGill. It would seem that any sort of incentive for a blood donation would be totally unnecessary. University students should realize the great need for blood and act accordingly. The total campus objective will only supply the hospitals of this Province with a week's quota.

McGill's clinics in the past have only lasted five days. It was thought that this limited time period may have not been sufficient to meet the potential response. This year the Clinic will run an extra two days. It is hoped that this move on the part of the Committee will not end in disappointment.

From The Ivory Tower

A Plea For Moderation

Last Friday, October 21, there appeared in the MONTREAL STAR a report of an address presented before the McGill Graduates Society by Dr. F. Cyril James, Principal of McGill University. In his speech, Dr. James hinted that there might be a rise in fees for the students in the near future. This is due to the increase of the expenditures incurred in the operations of The Royal Institute for the Advancement of Learning, and an expected rise in financial costs with the growth, in numbers, of the student body.

Another reason for the increased cost of operating this University is that it has become more difficult for able Ph.D's and learned members of McGill's Teaching Staff to resist the lucrative offers of industry rather than accept the insufficient remuneration which they might or do receive from this University. McGill, by necessity of maintaining a superior professional membership, would have to increase salaries.

We find no fault with some of the means mentioned to increase revenues, such as larger endowments, government grants, and contributions. However an increase of student fees should not be used as one of the solutions.

McGill has nearly always been plagued with more liabilities than assets and it is unlikely that this condition will disappear entirely. Since 1949, fees have been increased approximately 30%, yet the University debt does not seen to diminish. Since this approach has been experienced several times during the past five years and has not proved to be the Pot of Gold at the end of the Rainbow, it does not seem justifiable to burden the student again.

It is strange, perhaps a phenomenon, that we Canadians pride ourselves in our country, in our cultural heritage (whatever that might be) and yet scoff at our American friends because we sometimes think they are blatant or brash and have an excessive amount of patriotism. We are annoyed at the average American for having so little knowledge of Canada, while we know so much, so we think, about the United States. However, before we complain about the United States, let us take inventory of ourselves.

The shocking fact that first comes to our mind is the relatively small number of Canadian Universities. For a country whose population totals almost sixteen million people, there are approximately twenty universities. The United States with a population of ten times as great in numbers has fifty times or more, the amount of universities that exist in Canada. The American approach to education on the university level, i.e. State universities, state and federal grants, is far more realistic than Canada's attempt (eg. Massey Commission) and the Provincial Government aid program that exists in Quebec.

We may readily point to some of the manifest faults of the United States, yet we ourselves in our own lackadaisical manner do not suffer from an overabundance of virtues. Our approach to higher education is pathetic, and political expediency is the epitome of our endeavour. The time has come when the problems of a private institution such as McGill are no longer private but rather affect the entire nation. The contribution from a university to the province or country in which it exists is immeasurable. Men and women, graduating from McGill add to the Nation's status; and in finality it is the state, either Provincial or Federal, that benefits from the education of its people. To increase our development, nationally and locally, it is continuously necessary to educate responsibly. The state, either Provincial or Federal, should be made to understand the relative importance of universities within its boundaries, and it should be the duty of an institution, such as McGill, to make certain that the public and our statesmen are in full awareness of this.

McGill University has always strived to be precise in its demands and has been extremely tactful. However, now is the time, that McGill should demand, even plead if necessary, that our governments give us more educational institutions that they have in the past, for the university is a far more integral part of government than we might believe. Only after these demands have been made, and they should be made publicly and vigorously, only then ought McGill as a last resort, increase student fees, if all other efforts fail.

To raise fees, without taking any other fervent recourse, will not solve the problem. Dr. James has stated that McGill, in regard to its student population, is interested in quality, not quantity. The method of limiting quantity is a fee raise, but this to all intents and purposes would equate the quality of the student to his financial assets.

If we must increase fees, let us bring our tradition up to date. We ought to change McGill's title which is, "The Royal Institution for the Advancement of Learning" and its Motto, "Grandescunt Aucta Labore" to "The Royal Institution for the Advancement of Learning — For Those Who Can Afford It" and the Motto to, "Grandescunt Aucta Labore cum Pecuniae", meaning "By work and Money all things increase and grow".

Letters to the Editor

Bloody Response

Sir;

In an era of wishy-washy adherence to mediocre norms, where conformity to accepted opinions is demanded at the expense of individuality, it is startlingly refreshing to find a frank, fearless exposition of an unusual and challenging religious viewpoint such as that expressed by Mr. Kingsbury.

To be atheistic in modern life is to live a barren existence. And yet the framework erected over 2,000 years by the Christian Church, despite schisms and offshoots, is just not adequate to cope with the spiritual needs of many modern thinking men. Mr. Kingsbury has obviously read the Bible, and being unsatisfied with the spiritual nourishment there, has had to start on his own individual, religious path — and that is a hard, rocky one. Those who condemn the writer must also condemn all men who have had the intellectual integrity and honesty to seek their own path through life and not be bound by the constricting bonds of existing moral codes and theologies.

His point about the Christian attitude to sin is very valid in this modern age, this 20th century, which I am sure will go down in history as the Age of Neuroses. One philosopher said that the only contribution made by Christianity to modern thought was the consciousness of sin. There was no sin in the modern sense in Rome or Greece. Sin has always been a convenient set of values in established usages.

No one can doubt that Mr. Kingsbury is a sincere man, and a courageous man. I think, in strong contrast to many Christians, he is also a happy man. Insofar as my views on religion strongly accord with his, I can assure him company and conversation in Hell.

Offer of Championship

Mr. Donald J. MacSween,
President A.S.U.S.

Dear Sir,

We have read with considerable interest and some surprise, of your intention to relieve the Engineering Faculty of Bloody Mary, — symbol of McGill blood-donating supremacy.

We admire your determination to capture our illustrious idol, but we feel that, as an Arts students you might be more coutious in the tone of your proposals. Perhaps we should remind you that last year the Engineers soundly trounced all other faculties in this competition.

We naturally accept your challenge, and your conditions, and we hope that, as a faculty, you will do your best to come close to us.

As engineers, we strive to be constructive. — To demonstrate this, our penalty is that you, as President of the losing faculty along with Mr. Tisshaw of Commerce, shall be required, with assistance from your colleagues to eradicate all Bloody Mary footprints from and including the main steps of the Engineering Building to the west door of the Physical Science Centre, commencing from the Engineering Building. (The use of paint removers is prohibited).

Should your condition permit it, you may then go and clean your own front steps!

Philip E. Coulter,
President, E.U.S.

Beware the Teddy Bank

Not long ago, a bank despatched to customers a coin bank in the shape of a plastic Teddy bear, along with a note reading: "The Piggy Bank has long been a symbol of thrift, but we have decided that the pig cannot be both good and bad. It cannot be a greedy, dirty, selfish animal that wallows in mud and still serve as an emblem of prudence and thrift. We propose to substitute a clean animal, and the Teddy bear seems to fill the bill."

We doubt whether the Teddy Bank will supplant the Piggy Bank, or shouuld. Children like greed, dirt, selfishness and mud just as much, if not more than prudence, thrift and cleanliness. Anyway, it's in dirt and mud where you find diamonds, oil and uranium. At the Royal Bank, we give away neither Teddy nor Piggy Banks, so if you want to save money, you'll either have to buy one or pay us regular visits. It only takes a dollar to open a Savings Account, so how about it? There are six Royal Bank branches near McGill - Peel & Sherbrooke, St. Catherine & McGill College, St. Catherine & Stanley, Sherbrooke & Bleury, Sherbrooke & Guy and Sherbrooke & Fort. The Royal Bank of Canada.

POST-MORTEMS

by IRWIN SANKOFF

McGill's stunning 16-9 victory over Varsity's blue Blues last Saturday brought several winning and losing streaks of various natures to an end. To begin with the win for the Redmen was their first in their last ten games. Previous to this they had lost eight and tied one. Varsity had also walloped the Red and White four times in a row over a stretch of three seasons. For the Torontonians it was their first loss in ten league games over a period of two years, the Golden Gaels being the last squad to dump the Blue and White. Varsity had also gone 13 in a row, including exhibitions, without a black mark on their record. But as the old axiom says, all good things must end sometimes.

While on the subject of streaks, the Western Mustangs have gone five straight games without a win. It also should be noted that the Mustangs are in the very strange position of looking up at the rest of the league from the cellar position. A win for the Redmen on Saturday can clinch the basement spot for Johnny Metras' team and also a sweet measure of revenge for the McGillians.

The Western squad managed to score 17 points against Queen's last week and that is the most points which Queen's have had scored on them this year. The three touchdowns which the Mustangs scored upped their mark for the season to exactly four. All this points to the fact that the Purple and White offense has improved its scoring potential since that day when they tied the Redmen 6 - 6, and that the Redmen will have a real battle on their hands come Saturday.

Statistics from the first Western-McGill game show that Ralph Simmons and Neil Desborough had things pretty much their own way between the two 20 yard lines. Simmons picked up 117 yards in 20 carries, while Desborough made 60 in 12 running plays. The other big Western groundgainers that day were Garnet Mason and Walt Delahey. The former made 24 yards in eight carries and Delahey carried the pigskin for 62 yards in 13 tries.

The averages for the Redmen's best ballcarriers that day compare very favourably with Western's, but show that the Red and White only had the ball for short periods. Bob Holland made 33 in three tries, Bob Perry made 17 in four, Bob Hutcheson went for 22 yards on four carries while Rick Adrian in 12 carries went for 63 yards. Against Varsity, Perry made 43 in nine carries, Adrian 20 on five and Hutcheson 40 on 10.

Another thing at the football game which drew quite a bit of comment was the performance of the McGill band. This year's edition of the band is perhaps the best in the Intercollegiate loop. We've seen all the bands in action and feel that the strains of music from ours is just about tops. In addition the formations are quite original and are run through with good coordination.

Moving over from Canadian football to the English counterpart, Rugger, we find that the McGill team has once again annexed the championship. This is the sixth straight season that the title has remained in McGill. Congratulations are in store for coach Howie Ryan and the team members. It should be mentioned here that it is difficult to find players in any sport who have the stamina and spirit of the rugger players. In last week's game, one of the McGill players played five minutes with a painful shoulder separation. The week before in Toronto this same boy was helped from the field with a twisted ankle, but after having it taped limped back into action.

Switching over from the fall sports to the winter pastime of hockey, we find that Rocky Robillard is endeavouring to get his hockey Redmen in shape. Robillard only lost three men from last year's second place squad, but they just about formed the nucleus of his team. Gone from the Redmen ranks are goalie Bernie Wong, defenseman Ron Robertson, the team's most valuable player; and the team's leading scorer Herb English. The hockey team play their perennial rivals, the U of M Carabins, in the opening game on November 26.

Back on the subject of football once again, it seems that Harry Sonshine, of Argonaut fame, has made himself number one man on the U of T hate parade. All Harry did last week was send three of his top imports down to Queen's to give the Gaels some pointers (and maybe show them some Argo pass patterns). Does this mean that anymore imports that Toronto drop will be picked up by Queen's? or was Harry scouting Ottawa castoff Gus Braccia?

SCOPE GETS DISCOUNT ON STUDENT TICKETS

Special reductions in ticket prices to various Montreal theatrical productions have been obtained for McGill students, it was announced yesterday by Scope officials.

These include a 25 per cent reduction for Tea And Sympathy, the former Broadway hit that is currently playing at Her Majesty's.

Seats are available at the special price in the rear of the orchestra and parts of the first balcony, and are good all days except Friday and Saturday. Tickets are available at the box office upon presentation of a library card.

A similar reduction has been obtained for Marcel Marceau, currently appearing at the Monument Nationale, 1182 St. Lawrence boulevard. Tickets are good Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings until Nov. 5.

All performances of the Montreal Repertory Theatre are available at a 40 per cent discount, they said.

Ukrainian Club Has Lower Rates

The McGill Ukrainian Club has arranged reduced rate for students who wish to attend the 5:30 p.m. performance on Saturday, of the Ukranian Bandurist Chorus at the Plateau Hall.

The Chorus, the only one of its kind in the free world today, is the result of the evolution over the centuries of troubadors, or folk singers, who travelled across the vast steppes and through the forests of the Ukraine living by their art of bandura playing and singing.

The tone of the bandura is rather like that of the harp and forms good support for the voices of the choir. All members of the choir play the stringed instrument and sing at the same time.

DANCE CLASSES START OCT. 31

Student dance classes will officially start Oct. 31, it was announced yesterday by Alec Bhanos, chairman.

With only one week left to register, Bhanos said he expected an "unusually high registration." He said several fraternities are sending members en masse to make participation even more campus-wide.

Classes will be held every day Monday through Friday from 7 to 9 p.m., and on Saturday afternoons, under the instruction of Billie and Michael.
